SURREY MENTAL HEALTH SERVICES HAVE YOUR SAY

IF YOU are someone who uses mental health services or if you care for someone who does, you understand better than anyone what is important in mental health treatment, care and support. If you work in statutory or voluntary mental health or allied services, you also have a unique perspective on mental health issues.

Each of you is in a position to say what is important in the planning and development of mental health services. Come and meet others who feel the same – and help make a difference in Surrey

How can you make a difference?

There are four mental health Stakeholder Groups in Surrey. The aim is to hear what people who have experience of mental health services – as a patient/service user, carer or those providing help and support in voluntary or statutory organisations – have to say about how services could be improved and developed.

These views are fed into the Surrey Local Implementation Team (LIT). The LIT is responsible for ensuring local mental health services are delivered, coordinated and developed in line with national policy and recommendations.

By joining your local mental health Stakeholder Group you are adding your unique voice. It is each individual's experience that can help make a difference to mental health service development in Surrey.

Your Stakeholder group needs you!

Changes in health and social care are emphasising the importance of patient centred services. Now has never been a better time to have your say about mental health services in Surrey.

Come to your nearest mental health Stakeholder Group. Join us for a cup of tea and discover how important your views are in helping improve mental health services locally and across Surrey.

Expenses are paid in line with the NHS Surrey reimbursement policy (for more information contact Janine Sanderson – details below)
